NEW FOOD SERVICE FOR UB?

by Markus M. Blaus

Recently the Food Advisory Committee released the results of a survey on the quality of food offered at the University of Bridgeport. The advisory committee was comprised of ten people representing faculty and international, undergraduate and graduate students. As the statistics illustrate, an overwhelming majority of students and faculty are not happy with the food service they are currently receiving. The survey results have prompted the committee to accept bids from three other companies in addition to DAKA.

Ralph Lembo, the Dining Service Director and a representative of DAKA responded to the survey by saying he was disappointed with the results. He further commented that the entire structure of the survey was unprofessional. Lembo used as an example, "What's the difference between needs improvement and below expectation?" If "needs improvement" and "below expectations" are the same as Lembo suggests, then that leaves a mere 2% of the students polled that are satisfied with the service provided by DAKA.

Lembo went on to say that he doesn't believe the survey was "indicative of the years of expenditures and effort that DAKA had been putting in." He says that Marina Dining hall was in very poor condition and that DAKA is making improvements all around. Many students I interviewed disagreed saying that the food had been better last year and has been getting steadily worse since then.

DAKA insists that they are doing what is in the best interest of the university. Aramis Gonzalez, a member of the food advisory committee and the person responsible for compiling the survey was quoted as saying, "my basic motivation is to provide the best possible service for my fellow students, they are definitely dissatisfied with the situation."

A Resident Advisor (RA) explained, "I have gotten sick and my girls have gotten sick. I've dropped from 20 to 10 meals a week." Other students also said they get sick from the food, and have been vocally harassed at breakfast by the workers when management wasn't around.

DAKA said that the rudeness of the workers has been reported to them through their "React to Management" program. They stress, "give us names," and that they can not discipline the workers if they don't specifically know who they are.

Many students don't accept that response. They feel that for the amount of money they are paying for food service, that DAKA has the responsibility to make sure that there is enough supervision of the employees so that the students aren't harassed.

When I asked one of the workers (knowing how the food was prepared) whether or not he would eat the food, he commented that it depended on who cooked it. Lembo responded by saying, "I'm not surprised someone would say that." However, he went on to mention that he personally did a review of the cooks, and that he is happy with their performance.

DAKA admits that "the affordable quality of the program is not adequate," but they say that it isn't entirely their fault. "When DAKA took over the contract at UB, Marina Dining Hall was plagued with problems. It had a leaky roof, an old dishwasher and it got cold in the winter."

Many of the problems are economic, sighting the decrease in the number of students. With less students on the meal plan, DAKA is receiving less income. He said that with the money given they are producing the best quality food they can, but doesn't think the price should be raised because the affordability would go down.

Lembo said that DAKA doesn't need any more money but that "alternatives need to be explored to spend less and leave more money to spend on the quality of the program." When asked if they explored any alternatives DAKA replied, "we as a company have a lot of options that we are going to propose to the university." He went on to explain, "I think it will be a carefully designed balance between utilization of facilities to accommodate less labor, more productivity, and a better dining atmosphere."

The only specific item DAKA said they had planned was to propose an "international food court" to accommodate international students and help add variety. Lembo went on to say "something totally new is in the near future."

The advisory committee's next step is to make an on-site inspection of a facility from each of the prospective food services. No date has yet been given as to when a final decision will be made, but one is expected shortly.

Needed Changes

by Lori Melzak

The current rise in security problems has prompted the University of Bridgeport's administration to evaluate their current policy, and make needed changes.

In early November a survey was distributed to all residents by the University Student Council Committee on Residence Halls. The survey focused on how the students felt about the current security system. Aramis Gonzales, a member of the committee along with other members came up with the following figures:

- Only 56 percent out of 1400 students responded to the survey.
- 73 percent felt security in resident halls were inadequate for the following reasons:

1. Students are not reliable.
2. Students put themselves in danger when they sit security.
3. Students are intimidated by visitors and peers, therefore rules for entering the halls are not enforced.
4. Public safety officials presently have limited responsibility for monitoring residence halls.
- 63 percent of the students felt the need for the non-student security program to be enforced as soon as possible.

- 32 percent did not.
- 50 percent of the students agreed to pay an extra $24.00 a year.
- 44 percent did not.
- 51 percent did not respond.
- 50 percent of the students preferred that an outside company be hired.
- 34 percent felt that a public safety officer would suffice.

The Student Council proposed that a non-security officer monitor be hired during high risk times. These high risk days are Thursday, Friday, and Saturday nights between the hours of 10pm and 6am. This program was found to be very effective at both Boston College and Boston University. The council further believes that this system will help to reduce damage in the lobbies, provide a more secure environment, and help establish a feeling of safety for all residents.

A letter to all the students from vice-president of student services Jacqueline D. Benamati soon followed the survey explaining that there has been a large increase in security reports, showing a pattern of increasingly negative behavior among students. Physical encounters between roommates, harassing phone calls, and bomb threats are a few examples of this.

Also mentioned in the letter was breach of residence hall security, including non-student trespassing. The needed changes would become prevalent after all of the information from the survey and the recommendations from the residence Hall Association were compiled.

Over the past few months, the administration continued to review the problems. In early February, Paul DeGennaro, dean of Student Life, Allen Longeddyke, Director of Residence Life and Vice President Benamati held a mandatory meeting with all hall directors, security coordinators, and the security committee to discuss the results of the surveys. The decision was made to hire uniformed security monitors on an experimental basis. These guards would be on duty during the high risk periods at a fee of $24 per student for the remainder of the year.

Sandra Schulman, junior class president and security coordinator for Schine Hall agreed with Mr. Longeddyke that "having a security monitor at the door will act as a deterrent for student crime."

The security monitors were hired from Burns International Security Service. They will be dressed in uniform, but will not be armed, since they are monitors, not guards.

The students will have to show their I.D. to the monitor when they enter the buildings. The I.D.s will have a red sticker saying that the person is a resident of the particular building, instead of the old method of looking the student's name up on a master list.

If a student wishes to enter a building other than their own to visit a friend, the monitors will call the resident to the lobby to identify their guest and sign them in.

This system was originally planned to begin on February 25th, but due to the fact that the stickers, and a necessary letter informing the students and parents about the change were not ready, the administration opted to begin the system on March 3rd.

In addition, the administration is looking into a long-term plan to change the locks on the buildings and rearrange the lobby layout to further improve the new security system.

Coping with Passive Loss Regulations
Topic of UB Law School
Video Review

Understanding the complex regulations governing deductions of tax shelter losses against ordinary income will be the topic of an ALI-ABA video Law Review Program telecast live via satellite to the University of Bridgeport School of Law April 7, noon - 4 p.m.

The program will be presented in Room 126 of the UB School of Law, University Avenue, Bridgeport.

Under regulations recently issued by the Internal Revenue Service, sharp tax increases will hit thousands of individuals who claim losses from activities in which they do not actively participate, according to the American Law Institute-American Bar Association (ALI-ABA). These regulations, lengthy, technical, and difficult to digest quickly, are the first set of at least three sets to be released by the IRS, ALI-ABA added.

Designed for tax and non-tax practitioners, as well as CPAs, the program will feature a panel of nationally recognized experts on passive activity income and losses. Among the panelists will be the IRS official who is chiefly responsible for drafting the regulations.

In addition, guidance will also be given on completing the newly-issued Form 8582 (Passive Activity Loss Limitations) to be attached to 1987 tax returns.

Viewers will have an opportunity to submit questions directly to program panelists. For additional information, call the UB school of Law, 576-4641.

PHS Gift to UB
Establishes New Program

An innovative program in which a university and a high school develop programs to teach high school students about the elderly has been established with a gift from Physician's Health Services (PHS) to the University of Bridgeport.

UB's nationally-known Center for the Study of Aging received $7,500 in funding from PHS, a Trumbull-based health maintenance organization, to develop a program to teach high school students about the process of aging.

Trumbull High School will be the first of several area schools to offer the course, which will provide students the opportunity to gain college credit.

"The program will help to create a better understanding between generations and offer some introductory material for students who may wish to pursue careers in gerontology and human services," said Dr. Mark A. Edinberg, director of UB's Center for the Study of Aging and the author of the book, "Talking with Your Aging Parents."

Herbert said PHS was responding to requests from both the Trumbull Chamber of Commerce and the superintendent of schools in Trumbull, Edwin T. Merritt, to involve the local business community in ways to improve the secondary school system.

He said that UB's Center for the Study of Aging provided an effective resource to develop such a program.

UB President Janel D. Greenwood said the PHS action would lead to involvement by other health services organizations in the area of educating young people about the needs of the elderly.

"The leadership of PHS will take us into an innovative area of program development between high schools and universities," Dr. Greenwood said. "We look forward to using this program as a national model for others."

UB faculty will assist in teaching the course, which will include tours of nursing homes, a visit to the UB campus to hear experts in the field of gerontology and visits to the high school classrooms by professionals involved with services to the elderly. The program will also include consultation and guest lectures to students, faculty, staff and parent-teacher groups, Dr. Edinberg said.

Other school systems which will be offering the course later include Fairfield, Bridgeport and Stratford, he added.

Michael Herbert, president of Physicians' Health Services and a member of the UB Board of Associates executive committee, said the program would help to improve the curricula in area secondary schools while also providing important understanding of a growing need in the nation.

"Our school systems can and should be training people to understand the special needs of the elderly, who are becoming an increasingly larger part of our population," Herbert said. "This is a pro-active step to involve the public and private sectors in meeting a need."

Russian Professor of Philosophy to speak at UB

Dr. Sergei Kropotov, chair of the Aesthetics Department of Philosophy, Urals State University, USSR, will speak on "Life and Art in the Soviet Union Today" at the University of Bridgeport, March 17 at noon. He will present the lecture in Room 4 of Eleanor Naylor Dana Hall, 30 Hazel St.

Dr. Kropotov's presentation will be part of a two-day visit to UB as part of the International Research and Exchange Program (IREX).

According to Dr. Kropotov, artistic expression in the USSR holds a "specific place in the system of human spiritual life, and is conceived as a special form of spiritual conversation or dialogue. It is a product of truth, and is valuable information that exists only in an unfinished, ongoing process."

In addition, people of the Soviet Union often view art as a "super-pragmatic, utilitarian mechanism that is used for mastering human reality," he says in excerpts from his March 17 lecture.

An assistant professor of Philosophy at Urals State University in Sverdlovsk, Dr. Kropotov is a specialist in the role of art in spiritual and cultural life.

During the academic year, he is a visiting professor at the University of Pennsylvania under a grant from the IREX Board.

For more information, call the University of Bridgeport Philosophy Department, 576-4534.

SPORTS

Men's Basketball Profile

by Sports Editor
John Ziobro

John Mullin, a 6'3", 200 pound senior guard from Brooklyn, N.Y., has had a highly successful career at the University of Bridgeport. Mullin came to U.B. from Xaverian High School in Brooklyn, where he achieved such honors as All-Catholic as well as All-New York City.

As a freshman he averaged 6.8 points a game while maintaining a starting position in all of U.B.'s 32 games. During that year the Knights, along with Manute Boll, went to the final four in division II.

In his sophomore year, tragedy struck as Mullin came down with a severe case of appendicitis. His illness required emergency surgery, and caused him to miss 14 games.

During Mullin's next year he averaged 14.3 points a game while finishing fifth in the NECC with a .418 (38-91) three-point shooting percentage. In two games against Sacred Heart University, he scored a career high of 35 points in the first game and 19 points in the second. In his last game of the season against SHU he scored 26 points, mostly from the three point range, but Bridgeport lost in the first round of the NECC play-offs.

As a Co-Captain of this year's squad, he has been instrumental in leading the team to a 19-9 record. John Mullin will surely be missed next year as both a leader and a player who gives 100% every game. It will be interesting to see if Coach Webster can find anyone to fill Mullin's shoes.

Mens Basketball Ends Season with 19-9 Mark

Bridgeport, CT: Earlier this year, the N.C.A.A. placed the University of Bridgeport on probation. The penalty may have been justified, but that is still up for debate. One thing was certain, the Purple Knights from UB would not prance through the 1987-88 campaign realizing they had nowhere to go at the season's end. They played their hardest day in and day out, and that showed with a near-20 victory season at the campaign's close last Friday evening.

Bridgeport, CT: UB began its final five-game performance with a 99-88 victory over the visiting Keene State Owls. Senior co-captain Norman Taylor provided more than the Owls could handle, netting 32 points and grabbing 14 rebounds. Four other Knights hit double figures with Greg Murphy and John Mullin contributing 16 and 14, respectively. Sophomore guard Stevie Ray duplicated his record-setting performance as he handed out 19 assists against KSC. Bridgeport, CT: Despite a 33-point showing from Taylor, the Knights fell to the University of New Haven, 93-82 at the "HUBB" on Feb. 17. The game was knotted at 51 at the half, but the Chargers outscored UB 42-31 in the second stanza.

Keene, NH: The Knights travelled to Keene, NH on the 20th to face KSC for the second time in nine days. For the second time in nine days, UB proved victorious, this time by a score of 91-73. Seniors Taylor and Deng Nhial connected for 21 and 19 points apiece. Ray contributed a career-high 16 points while handing out 11 assists against the Owls. Bridgeport, CT: The Sacred Heart hex captured the Knights for the second time this season as UB fell to SHU, 97-85. Taylor was himself again, netting 33 points and grabbing 10 rebounds. Senior co-captains John Mullin added 18 points in the loss. New Haven, CT: The end of the 1987-88 season and the collegiate career of four UB basketball players lingered 40 minutes from the start of last Friday's meeting with Southern Connecticut. Bridgeport had four players in double figures with Nhial leading the way with 23. Mullin closely followed with 20. For only the third time this season, Taylor was held under 20 points as he contributed 17 to the victory. Taylor finished his career as the all time scorer at UB with 2,169 points. He collected 1,250 rebounds over the last four years which places him third on the all-time list behind Gus Seaman and Lou Saccone.

Knight Leaders: Norman Taylor Sr., F 25.7 ppg, 13.1 rpg; John Mullin Sr., G 13.4 ppg; Deng Nhial Sr., G/F 12.9 ppg, 5.1 rpg; Stevie Ray So., PG 6.0 ppg, 280 (10.0 pg) assists.
